Castlegem acquires 20% of Growthr Ltd., makes the move to WHMCS, and offers XEN as well

In a strategic move Castlegem Ltd. has acquired 20% of Growthr Ltd., an online advertising portal and development company. The deal was made to round off Castlegem's advertising segment and to increase the product portfolio. This will give existing and new customers a new alternative of streamlining SEO and advertising campaigns.

Late in August Castlegem made the move away from several CRM software lines to consolidate their customers, affiliates and associates, numbering over 18,000, into a single management portal WHMCS. This will further streamline support, product provision, and make it easier for clients to manage their services and products as well through the new client portal.

All of Castlegem's virtual private server (VPS) products have been revised in pricing and service structure, and in addition to OpenVZ and KVM, XEN has been added as virtualisation technology. Castlegem, therefore, is one of the few providers offering all mainstream types of virtualisation for their virtual private server systems. The new pricing starts at less than USD 5 per month for a fully functional VPS.
